Herbert Vos and Wife in Near Auto Accident

Mr. and Mrs. H. Vos, came very near to being mixed up in a bad auto accident last Saturday. While driving north on their way to Burlington as they came to Benham's corners they saw a large touring car coming at a terrific rate of speed from the east. Both drivers realized that it was going to be a close shave, but Vos, who was driving at a moderate rate had full control of his car and consequently kept his head.

The other driver acting on the spur of the moment tried to make a turn and just then one of the rear wheels gave way. In less than a second the big car had turned over pinning its occupants underneath with barely three feet between it and the Vos machine.

As quickly as possible the occupants were released and it was found that the top of the car had served to save them from serious injury. One woman was at first thought to be badly hurt and was sent to Kenosha in an ambulance but later her injuries were pronounced to be of a minor nature, although a false report of her death was circulated.

The party was on their way to Twin Lakes for a picnic, but the desire to "get there quick" prevented them from getting there at all.

Contract for Belvidere Road is Awarded

The State Highway Department at Springfield Monday telegraphed instructions to the Road and Bridge committee of the Lake County supervisors instructing them to award to Paschen Brothers the contract for putting in the contract paving on Belvidere street from Grayslake to Volo. This includes two sections of the road and includes the furnishing of cement.

The Standard Paving company received the contract for putting in the stretch of road between Milwaukee road and Grayslake. This means that the work of putting in the new state road will be started immediately. The awarding of the contract had been referred to the state department because the bid of the contractors exceeded the estimate of the county superintendent of highways.

Falls Down Elevator Shaft

Mike Golden met with quite a serious accident while in Williams Bros. store last Monday. He had been outside after some wire and entered the store by the rear door. Mistaking his way he walked directly into the elevator shaft and the elevator being down at the time he pitched downward from the first floor to the basement. As a result of the fall he was considerably bruised and shaken up and both bones of his right leg were broken.

He was picked up and carried at once to the doctor's office where the broken bones were set, and later he was taken to his home. He will be laid up for some time from the effects of the accident.

Notice of Joint Meeting June 6

There will be a joint meeting of the Village Board and the Commercial Association Friday evening, June 6, at which time Attorney E. M. There was one failure in the eighth grade.

The promotion exercises of the grade school will be held at the high school auditorium this (Thursday) evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Peck will return to the primary room next year and Miss Hester Goldy will again take charge of the fifth and sixth grades. Miss McNamara, of Burlington, will have charge of the third and fourth grades the coming year. Miss Doud will not return, but as yet no one has been secured to take her place. On account of the board having decided not to employ an assistant teacher, Miss Jennie Willat will not be retained.

MOTHER OF 4 ARRESTED FOR MURDER

Highland Park Wife Held as Husband's Slayer, as Analysis Shows Poison

HUSBAND DIED ON MAY 15

Mrs. Grace Strang, mother of four children, was arrested last week Thursday on a charge of having murdered her husband Herbert, who died May 15, at his home, 438 Lincoln place, Highland Park.

Mrs. Strang was ordered held without bonds in the Lake county jail at Waukegan following the report of Coroner's Physician Wm. McNally of Chicago that the contents of the dead man's stomach showed a considerable quantity of strychnine.

"I am innocent," said Mrs. Strang. "The charge is preposterous."

"If Herbert Strang died of poisoning somebody other than Mrs. Strang administered it," said her brother, Wm. Lyles of Highland, superintendent of transportation of the Chicago North Shore and Electric railroad. "I shall fight this case with all the means at my command."

State's Attorney James G. Welch of Lake county issued a statement that "Mrs. Strang had an affair with another man and for that reason desired to be free of her husband."

At his request the preliminary hearing, convened last Thursday before Justice Leo P. Farmer at Waukegan, was continued until June 5, to permit the state to assemble additional evidence. Sheriff Elmer Green arrested Mrs. Strang at her Highland Park home. She was in the midst of housework and was surrounded by her four children, the oldest of whom, Kenneth, is 15 years. The others are Donald, 13; Leonore, the only daughter, 9, and Thomas 4.

Strang, 40 years old, an employee for twenty years of the Chicago, North Shore and Electric railroad, had lived the greater part of his life in Highland Park. He was in comfortable circumstances. He owned his own home. He was the son of Thomas Strang, formerly chairman of the board of supervisors of Lake county.

The first intimation that the authorities suspected his death might not have occurred from natural causes came on May 18, when Coroner John L. Taylor of Lake county ordered an analysis of the stomach contents. Mrs. Strang at the inquest said she believed death had been caused by embolism. The inquest was continued.

The testimony was that on the night of May 15, Strang had eaten heartily of a meal prepared by Mrs. Strang. He had gone to bed soon after in the apartment occupied by him and his son, Thomas, on the first floor. Mrs. Strang and the other three children retired for the night to the second floor.

About 11 o'clock Thomas heard his father groaning and notified the mother. She came downstairs and summoned a physician. He died before the physician arrived, without regaining consciousness.

Mr. and Mrs. Strang had not been living together. For fifteen months she had made her home at Bostwick, Fla. She had returned to Highland Park May 1, two weeks before he died.

State's Attorney James G. Welch, who issued the startling statement Tuesday that he would be able, at the proper time, to tell where, and by whom the strychnine was purchased which resulted in the death of Herbert Strang, and further that he would be able to prove that Mrs. Strang was the murderer, sprang a still further surprise Wednesday morning when he announced that he would before Circuit Judge Edwards and ask permission to have a special jury called at once to consider the case.

The preliminary hearing was set for Thursday morning. The prosecutor called up Attorney R. J. Dady, counsel for Mrs. Strang, and served notice that he will ask for a week's continuance when the case is called. He admitted to the defendant's counsel his plan to summon a special grand jury.

Mr. Welch gave as his reason that he does not care at this time to uncover the evidence which he has uncovered and which he would have to at a preliminary hearing if he has any hope of

Phone Rates to Soar is Latest Joy Elicitor

Director Burleson has won his point and the telephone rates will be changed. Charles T. Ford, manager of the Waukegan branch has not as yet been advised as to when the change will take effect, but an increase in rates to Chicago telephone subscribers will be announced within the next few days, Bernard E. Sunny, president of the Chicago Telephone company, announced. "The minimum monthly guarantee for telephones in the homes will be increased," he said.

"In increasing tolls for long distance calls within the state a new basis is planned for Chicago rates, which will result in an increase to local subscribers."

"The Chicago Telephone company has been facing a financial problem because of the high cost of material and labor. We are only waiting for word from Judge Lamar, chief counsel for the Postmaster General at Washington."

The Supreme Court at Washington in a decision Monday upheld federal authority to establish interstate telephone rates.

No Such Word as Fall.

There is a difference between not succeeding and falling. The one is final; the other is only a temporary hindrance. If you persevere in spite of not succeeding, if you start again and act on the knowledge you have gained by your slip, it will not work you lasting injury. It is only when you surrender that you are really beaten. There is no such word as "fall" to one who will not give up.

Clean Photographs.

Dirty photographs are so unsightly that you will be glad to know there is a way to clean them. Moisten a soft cloth with warm water to which a little ammonia has been added; wring the cloth out well and wipe the photographs very lightly, drying them immediately with a soft dry cloth.

having the defendant bound over to the grand jury.

By summoning the grand jury he can present his evidence direct and ask that Mrs. Strang be indicted. If she is indicted the preliminary hearing will not be necessary and the defense would be in the dark as to the strength of the state's case.

On the other hand if the state's attorney had to appear at the preliminary hearing and unfold all his evidence, which he would have to do in case Mrs. Strang fought the case, and Attorney Dady has intimated that this course is contemplated instead of waiving examination, the state's case would have been weakened and the defense would have a better opportunity to prepare a case.

The fact that the state is asking but a week's continuance indicates that the case may be presented to the grand jury before the end of the week.

Death of Hugh R. Brogan Monday, June 2

Monday, June 2, marked the passing of Hugh R. Brogan, an aged resident of this village who for the past few weeks has been staying at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ned Bates at Grass Lake.

Mr. Brogan, who had lived until next November, would have reached the eightieth mile stone in life's journey, was born in Ireland. When a lad fourteen years of age he with his parents came to America and for a very short time they lived near Russell, then his father purchased the old home farm near Bean Hill, there it was that he grew to manhood.

Leaving the home place he went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he met Miss Catherine McEnany, whom he married on the second day of January 1866. Being lured by the call of the west they went immediately to Iowa, but remained there only about two years, when they came back to Illinois and purchased from his father a portion of the old home farm. There they lived until about twelve years ago when they retired from active life and came to reside in this village.

After the death of his wife he continued to live on in his own home and was cared for by his youngest daughter Florence until ill health caused her to enter a sanitarium, a few weeks ago, and he then in very poor health was taken to the home of Mrs. Bates where the last days of his life were spent.

He is survived by nine children, four daughters, Mrs. Ned Bates, Grass Lake; Mrs. B. F. Neher, and Miss Florence Brogan of Antioch, and Mrs. Geo. Yopp of Burlington, and five sons John, William and Charles of Antioch, Tom of Chicago and Ralph of Evanston. The funeral services were held at St. Peter's church this (Thursday) morning at 9:30 o'clock with burial at Mill Creek.

Wm. Hancock Has Auto Accident Last Thursday

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hancock met with quite an accident last Thursday afternoon when their car overturned on the road, a short distance south of Salem. Just as they were passing some horses Mr. Hancock turned his head for a second to look at them, and in that short space of time lost control of the machine which suddenly lurched to one side and turned over. Mr. Hancock was somewhat burned and considerably shaken up, but not seriously injured. Mrs. Hancock fared somewhat worse, her injuries consisting of numerous bruises and bumps and quite a serious injury to one leg. She is still confined to her bed but both are congratulating themselves that it was no worse and that they were spared broken bones.

Reception For Corp. White

There was a large reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John White last Saturday evening in honor of the safe return on Thursday last of their son, Corp. Clarence White who has seen two years service overseas with the 32nd division.

The house was tastefully decorated with the National colors combined with lilacs and apple blossoms. At twelve o'clock a seven course dinner was served, covers being laid for eighty guests. Mr. Dunning gave a very cleverly worded Welcome Home speech.

To say that Clarence was glad to meet his old friends once more, after the trying experiences of the past two years, but mildly expressed his feelings. And that they were most, surely glad to see him home again was very evident from the cordial welcome they extended to him.

Relative Value of Milks.

The fat globules of goats' milk are so small that cream rises very slowly. This quality, however, gives to the milk a uniform richness not possessed by cows' milk. There are now several condensed milk factories using goats' milk, which is condensed and sold for infant feeding. Many thousands of infants are compelled to live during their first few months on condensed cows' milk, and it is not the best food for their stomachs.

The Thirteenth Commandment

When Bayard opened the door Clay swept in like a March gale. He flung himself at Bayard and clutched his elbows in his hands and roared:

"Bayard! Bayard! It's come! We're rich! We're made! Eureka! Unceasing! Unstoppable! Wow! Listen! The other night while I was trailing a job in darkest New Jersey I ran across a little clue, and a little man who told me a little secret. The Germans have been getting ready for this war for years, piling up guns and ammunition for Der Tag. The other countries were caught only half ready. They have stopped the Germans on the Marne, but they've been using their shells at such a rate that the famine is near. Their only hope is to buy supplies of us. They're going to dump enough contracts on this country to furnish about a million dollars to every citizen. Their agents are pussy-footing round to distribute contracts quickly."

"The Bethlehem Steel company has gathered in a big lot of them, and I had a tip that the stock was going to boom; so are a lot of other stocks. I'd sell my right arm for a little cash. But there's no market for detached right arms, so I used mine to sign up a few little contracts for plating contracts, and I've plucked them and brought them to you." He broke into a dance and whizzed Bayard off his feet.

Bayard tried to be patient. "That's all very interesting, Clay, but take your delusions down to Bellevue, where they'll put you in the right cell. What can you or I do with ammunition contracts?"

"Accept 'em, you blamed lift! Open up your old shut-up factory and get busy."

"We have no machinery for making ammunition."

"Get it, then, or adapt your machinery! They need millions of each article, for there are millions of men in the field using up what they've got so fast that it's only a matter of weeks before they'll be desperate."

Bayard began to see the scheme—also the obstacles. "But it takes money to make these things. Where will we get the cash for the pay rolls and the raw materials?"

"From the banks! The banks are bursting open with idle money; it's rotting on their hands!"

Bayard went aglow with the realization of the opportunity. He began to tremble at the vision of the sudden avalanches of wealth pouring down the bleak mountains of despair. He could hear the roar of the Niagara of gold.

Daphne and Lella came rushing from concealment. Clay's beatitude was so complete that he forgot his resentments and kissed them both.

Bayard was frantic to be at work. He resolved to telephone the president of his company at once and lay the matter before him. Lella cannily advised Bayard to grasp the whip hand of the situation and keep it. She began to dance about the room like a Miriam celebrating the passage of the Red sea.

"The first thing we'll do," she said, "will be to get my jewelry out of the pawnshop and the second will be to buy some more. And, oh, the dresses and the hats!"

This asserted an sobering effect on Bayard. "No," he announced. "We've gone through hades once because I gambled away my reserves. This time I'm going to get a big reserve before I spend a cent. I'll never risk another ordeal like the one we've been through. No more fractures of the Thirteenth for me!"

Lella laughed.

Bayard went to the telephone to start the wheels of the factory in motion by summoning the president to council. He paused to ask: "He'll want to know who the foreign agent is you are dealing with? Or are there several? Who shall I say?"

"Wetherell," said Clay.

The great Skoda gun that suddenly one day dropped a monster shell in Dunkirk twenty miles off could hardly have caused more stupefaction than the name of Wetherell detonating in that room.

Daphne snatched her hand from Clay's. Bayard sprang up so sharply that he almost threw Lella forward on her face. Instinctively he caught her by the arm and saved her from falling. But instantly he flung her arm from him in a gush of disgust.

Clay gaped at the tableau in bewilderment. He had not dreamed that any of the three had ever heard of Wetherell. He could not imagine the bitterness the name involved.

"Will some kind friend please tell me what all the excitement is about?" This was not easy. Who wanted to tell Clay that Lella had just been accused of neglecting her husband and her own duties for the society of this very Wetherell? Lella herself was the one that told him.

"Look here, Bayard," Lella cooed and bled, "don't you think you've done enough? You've shown me that I can't trust me and you've ordered Wetherell never to come near me again. That's enough without bagsaring us all for spito? What else is it but cheap, nasty spite?"

"It's a great deal more than spite," Bayard groaned. "Do you think I'll accept favors from a man who has been courting you and got caught at it? I'd rather starve!"

"Well, I wouldn't!" Lella averred. "And I'm not going to starve. And I'm not going to let you commit harikari on Wetherell's doorstep just to spite him. I tell you again, once for all, there was nothing wrong in Wetherell's behavior, absolutely nothing. It's outrageous that you should accuse me of such horrible things."

So Bayard was coerced into having his life saved by his enemy. It was one thing, however, to consent to deal with Wetherell, and another to devise a tolerable reconciliation.

"Well," Bayard sighed, "beggars can't be choosers. If I'd saved my money I shouldn't have to take Wetherell's money."

Bayard called up the president of his company at the office. His oration made a huge success. Bayard began to smile to himself, to wink at the spectators, and finally to share in the apparent rapture of his distant counterpart.

The end of the matter was that when Bayard left the telephone he was a new man. He had cunningly raised his chief's hopes to the highest degree, yet withheld the name of the English agent. He explained that he intended to take Lella's advice and use his knowledge as a lever for his own advancement and Clay's.

Clay and Bayard got down to make figures, and the talk grew too technical for the women to endure. After hearing the first music of Bayard and Clay's chatting in hundreds of thousands of dollars Daphne stole out unheeded and went up to her own room.

Mr. Chivvis was sitting by a window in mournful idleness. Mrs. Chivvis was stitching away at her embroidery. She was cheerful—for her. She told Daphne that she had found a market for her needlework; the prices were poor but they were real. She advised Daphne to get to work with her.

Daphne had not the courage to say that her brother and her betrothed were about to become plutocrats. She said only that she was very tired. And there is no more exhausting drain on the nerves than their response to unexpected good news. It is more fatiguing than bad. She was surprised and shocked, too, to find how abominable she was all of a sudden about the petty earnings of a Chivvis.

CHAPTER XXII.

In those days the United States of America suddenly woke to the fact that they could pull themselves out of bankruptcy by helping the beleaguered states of Europe into it.

There were sudden gyrations of fortune and sudden collapses of failure. As in bonanza times, many were ruined, while the few prospered. But Clay and Bayard seemed to touch nothing that did not turn to gold. Bayard had gained immense prestige

When Daphne heard this she had to sit down to keep from falling down. Bayard resuscitated her with a check for a thousand dollars. It meant nothing more to her than abra-cadabra. The whole incredible alteration was a fairy story to her. She made a faint attempt to refuse the gift, but Bayard forced it back into her palm and closed her fingers on it.

She repaid Bayard with kisses till she lost count and embraces till they both lost breath. Then she borrowed from him enough cash to pay her moss-grown bill with the Chivvisses.

Daphne could not wait for the elevator. She ran up several flights of stairs, scratched the door with her palsied latchkey and flung herself into Mrs. Chivvis' arms and issued her—even Mrs. Chivvis. Her apology was the money for the bill. She flattered before her the cheek bearing the heavenly legend commanding the Fifth Avenue bank to "pay to Daphne Kip or order one thousand and no hundredths dollars" on penalty of incurring the displeasure of "Bayard Kip."

Mrs. Chivvis handled the parchment with reverence, and permitted her husband to touch it. It might have been one of the golden leaves of the sacred Book of Mormon, and she a sealed wife of Brigham himself.

"What are you planning to do with all this?" she said at length.

"I don't know," said Daphne. "What would you suggest?"

"You were planning to go into business. Why not use this as capital?"

"Fie! What business ought I to start—banking? or battleship building, or what?"

"There's embroidery," said Mrs. Chivvis.

Daphne had to guffaw at that. Mrs. Chivvis did not laugh. "I mean it," she urged; "think it over."

"All right, I'll think it over."

The novelty of being rich lost its savor with Lella, and the monotony of being neglected began to prey upon her damask soul. She and Daphne forgot their mutual grievances for their common grievance.

"That's the trouble with these husbands," Lella grumbled. "When they're in bad luck you can't lose 'em, and when they're in good you can't find 'em."

"It's the same with fiancés," said Daphne.

Daphne had the worst of it, for Lella began to wonder again, leaving Daphne to the society of Mrs. Chivvis, who kept urging her to invest her dwindling thousands before it was gone. But in the environs of noisy riches the schemes of Mrs. Chivvis demanded such prolonged labor for such minute profit that Daphne remained cold.

She began to resent Clay's neglect morosely. The few attentions he paid her only irritated her; his mind was so far away and his heart was all for his business. He was dazzled by the fierce white light of success, and he spoke to Daphne in a kind of drowsy hypnosis. And he spoke incessantly of the details of his business, or his gambles. He could not see how deaf she was to the very vulgar fractions of his speculations, or the mad arithmetic of his commissions. She yawned in his face when he grew eloquent on the dynamics of wealth, the higher philosophies or finance. And he never knew. He kissed her good-by as if he were kissing a government bond, safe and quiet and all his own.

After one of Clay's visits Mrs. Chivvis found Daphne in a brown study. Mrs. Chivvis explained her own affairs; and Daphne was so exhausted with the sultry problems of love that Mrs. Chivvis' business gossip was completely refreshing.

"I've been down to the Woman's exchange," she said, "trying to sell some of my needlework. They were very nice about it, but it means a terrible amount of labor for a pittance of money. You have to pay them so much a year for the privilege of putting your things on sale there. Then they don't guarantee to return it in good condition, and they don't guarantee to sell it; or if they do they charge you 20 per cent for their end of it."

"I couldn't see any profit in that, so I went to one of the jobbers. He said my style of work brought good prices in the big stores. But they won't pay him much and he'll pay me less."

"I was thinking—There's money in these things and in all sorts of needle things if you have a little capital."

"That's different," said Daphne. "And I've got some capital now. Do you remember suggesting to me once that we might go into business together—I thought you'd furnish the brains and I the money?"

"Oh, I didn't put it that way!"

"Anyway, it's true. Well, would you?"

"Land's sake! If you're a mind to furnish the money and the ideas and let me count the pennies, I'd like nothing better."

"Great! What could we go into?"

"What would you prefer?"

"Oh, any old business that will keep me busy and make a lot of money."

"My husband says that you can't make a lot of money without putting in a lot. That's one reason he has been kept down so. He never could get ahead. That was what we were saying up for—to get a little capital. And then the war came along—and we had to spend our savings. That same war has made your brother so rich that he could give you a small fortune. I don't believe you could do better than to put that into a business."

"Neither do I!" Daphne cried. "Let's!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

Daphne was going to be independent, but she was still all woman when it came to the selection of her special trade. She would be a business woman, but she would do a woman's business.

There were ever so many dainties and exquisites that she wanted to hang in her shop. She was going to have a window! With her name on it! That would be more fun than a limousine with crest on door.

Gradually her scheme enlarged. She would devote her shop to the whole mechanism of the boudoir. "Boudoirwear" was the word that pleased her.

It was in human nature that the partners should quarrel over a name for the baby before the baby was born. They spoke of themselves as "The Firm."

Finally Daphne, claiming the majority of the power, voted on bloc for "Boudoirwear," and claimed the victory. Mrs. Chivvis surrendered with the amendment that "Miss Kip" should be at one side, "Mrs. Chivvis" at the other. She bribed the assembly by promising that a cousin of hers, a young artist living in the Washington Meadows, should paint a pretty sign-board on a swinging shingle. After many designs had been composed and destroyed they agreed on this legend:

"My Husband Says That You Can't Make a Lot of Money Without Putting in a Lot"

BOUDOIRWEAR
Everything for the Boudoir.
Exquisite Things for Brides.
MISS KIP. MRS. CHIVVIS.

The canvas painted it well and illuminated it with elaborate initials and an allegorical figure of a young lady in a Cabist negligee. It had the traditional charm of a tavern board. In fact, their shop was to be a tavern for women in search of sartorial refreshment.

Troubles mustered about them as weeds above up in a garden faster than they can be plucked out. Expenses undreamed of materialized in swarms. Everything was delayed except the demands for their money. The petty cash box, like a sort of perverted fairy purse, emptied itself as fast as it was filled.

The petty cash was the least of their dismay. The grand cash was the main problem. They had stitched their fingers full of holes and piled up reams of fabrics, but the total was pathetically tiny.

One thing was instantly demonstrated. They must give up their plan or go into debt. Indeed, they already were in debt.

"We've got to take the plunge," said Daphne. "I'd rather die than go on paying a year's rent for an empty shop."

"I know," Mrs. Chivvis fretted, gnawing her thin lips, "but it's a risk. You'd better ask your brother."

"No!" Daphne stormed. "It's going to win out on my own. Poor Bayard is too busy to be bothered with my troubles. He doesn't know I have any. And Lella is so busy with her social business that she never asks me what I'm up to."

"But what are we to do?" Mrs. Chivvis wailed. "We can't go on with our stock, and you have no money left, and I hadn't any to start with."

"There's only one thing to do," Daphne answered, with a sphinxlike solemnity. "Buy on credit. It's a case of nothing venture, nothing gain; nothing purchase, nothing sell; nothing borrow, nothing pay. The only way to get out of debt is to go in deeper—like getting a fish hook out of your thumb."

Mrs. Chivvis suffered herself to be persuaded. They visited the wholesalers and the jobbers and were well received, having paid cash before—and, thanks to Mr. Chivvis' suggestion, having been astute enough to demand discount for cash.

And now the motor-trucks and the delivery wagons and the cyclecars and the messenger boys began to pour stock into the little shop. It was pleasant not to have to pay for things, though the tips were reaching alarming proportions, and the bundle of bills for future settlement grew and grew.

Mrs. Chivvis made a list of their debts and tried to show it to Daphne, but she stopped her eyes and ears and forbade any discussion that would quench her spirit.

In the swirl of her tasks Daphne almost forgot Clay Wimburn. She was too busy to care much. She had no time to mourn. Clay was only one among a myriad regrets, and his affairs could wait. Her business needs could not.

Clay did not come near her. He spent a lot of money trying to get her off his mind. He got a good deal on his conscience, but not Daphne off his mind. He longed for her especially, too, because there came a sudden disaster to his schemes. He was not so rich as he had been. Indeed, he could not be sure that he was rich at all. Any day might smother him with bankruptcy. This fear kept him from Daphne, too.

The bouncing munition stocks that were known as "war babies" had abruptly fallen into a decline. The submarine that torpedoed the Lusitania shattered Wall street's joy, threw the dread of war into the United States, and set every one to questioning the problem of revenge and its cost.

The slump in the market came at the most unfortunate moment for Bayard and Clay. Any moment of slump, indeed, would have come most untimely for their ventures.

"Kip and Chivvis" were making a picnic ground of the shop. Behind the soap-selled windows they laughed and debated on arrangements and price tags and show cards.

Mr. Chivvis, still out of a job, acted as maid of all work and steward, and grew so useful that they had to put him out. And at last the moment arrived when they declared the shop open, "raised the curtain," as Daphne said.

She waited with a stage-fright she had not felt in Rehearsal theater. There was no lack of temperament in her manner now. But there was no audience, either.

At night Kip and Chivvis locked their doors and went home, discouraged beyond words and dimly weary in the legs, also in the small muscles which had been kept at an expectant tension all day long.

Occasional purchases were made, but unimportant. Kip and Chivvis tried to learn what interested people and what did not. They realized that they had far too much of certain things and far too little of others. They attempted to sell the deadwood by marking it down; but it would not move.

"What do the women care for prices?" Daphne railed. "They are spending some man's money, anyway. They pretend that it's to please him, but they know and we know that it's because they hate each other."

One day a great lady who could hardly squeeze through the door creaked into the shop and spilled herself into a startled little chair like a lion of coal. Daphne felt that she was about to die on their hands or ask for an ambulance, but she asked instead for an embroidered breakfast gown from the window.

Mrs. Chivvis fetched it and the old dress clutched it from her, holding it up to her nose as if to sniff it, but really to see it.

"That's it! That's what I've been looking for!" she wheezed. "Have you got much of this sort of thing?"

"Oh yes."

"Agh, that's good! My daughter is marrying in some haste—a young imbecile who's going over to France to run an ambulance. I'm Mrs. Romilly."

Mrs. Chivvis waited unperturbed for further identification. Daphne had never heard of Mrs. Romilly, either, but she gasped as if she had been saying her prayers at the shrine of Romilly from childhood and now had been visited by the patron saint, whom she had recognized at once, of course.

"Oh yes, of course."

Mrs. Romilly was conching on: "I've been to several shops, and I was almost in despair until I saw your sign. If you could do a few things in rather a hurry I fancy I could give you a large-ish order. And if the things were at all successful, I could throw quite a little trade your way. You're rather new, aren't you?"

Daphne assented that the firm was quite new. She brought forward an order pad and stood at attention.

Mrs. Romilly had trousered a large family of children and several poor relations. She knew what she wanted and what she ought to pay for it and when it should be done. Daphne took down her orders as if the little room were the mere vestibule to an enormous sweatshop where hundreds of sempsters would seize the job and complete it in a jiffy.

King's Stuart Portrait

It is interesting to hear of the king buying an old portrait of James II, for it suggests that the romantic interest in the house of Stuart which Queen Victoria felt very strongly is hereditary. (She made collections of Stuart souvenirs, hated Queen Elizabeth, shared Scot affection for Mary Stuart, and reproached Macaulay with having been hard on the memory of her ancestor James II. "Not your majesty's ancestor," said Macaulay, "your majesty's predecessor.")—and was very proud of his reply.—London Mail.

PHYSICALLY FIT AT ANY AGE

It isn't age, it's careless living that puts men "down and out." Keep your internal organs in good condition and you will always be physically fit.

The kidneys are the most over-worked organs in the human body. When they break down under the strain and the deadly uric acid accumulates and crystallizes look out! These sharp crystals tear and scratch the delicate urinary channels causing excruciating pain and set up irritations which may cause premature degeneration and often do turn into deadly Bright's Disease.

One of the first warnings of sluggish kidney action is pain or stiffness in the small of the back, loss of appetite, indigestion or rheumatism.

Do not wait until the danger is upon you. At the first indication of trouble go after the cause at once. Get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL HAWLEM OIL Capsules, imported direct from the laboratories in Holland. They will give almost immediate relief. If for any cause they should not, your money will be refunded. But be sure to get GOLD MEDAL. No one else is genuine. In sealed boxes, three sizes.—Adv.

Fought the Midnight.

Johnny came home from Sunday school quite thrilled by the lesson. "It was all about the Midnight," he said.

"The what?" asked his father.

"The Midnight," replied the boy. "Teacher told us how Olden fought the Midnight and knocked the daylight out of 'em in a twinkling."

GREAT WAR WORK OF PIGEONS ON BATTLEFIELDS AND THE SEA

Carriers of Vital Messages Ever Since Battle of Marne in 1914.

U-BOAT IS TRAPPED BY BIRD

News From Trenches Taken at Full Speed to Headquarters and Supply Lines—Information Gained From Captured Pigeons.

Paris.—At the Ternes gate of Paris may be seen a memorial, the work of Bartholdi, on which is inscribed: "Monument to the Pigeons of 1870." What memorial will acknowledge the services of carrier pigeons in the world's war of 1914-1918 remains to be seen, but their work amid barrage fire, bursting shrapnel, the zip-zip of machine-gun bullets and the death-dealing gases was of enormous value.

Carrier pigeons were used on all the battlefronts but their best work was on the western front, from the channel to the Swiss border and from the Alps to the Adriatic gulf. They carried messages at the Marne, when the Hunns were driven back by Marshal Joffre. Hundreds were used in the battle of the Yser, in Flanders, when the Belgians and the French halted the German advance; and they made many and frequent trips in the first battle of Ypres, in the drive on the channel ports when the British, French and Belgians stopped the Germans decisively in the final battle at the close of 1914. They aided in the capture of Neuve Chapelle by the British and they died in numbers with the British Tommies at the second battle of Ypres, when the Germans advanced toward the Xer canal using for the first time poisonous gas. Again the birds did valiant service when the French tried to break through in the Champagne in the fall of 1916, and in the whole series of the Verdun attacks lasting through July, oftentimes the only communications with men in advanced positions were the dogs that crept through the barbed wire and the carrier pigeons that returned with messages. Where telephone and wireless broke down, and men could not survive the storm of shell fire, it is recorded that 97 per cent of the messages carried by carrier pigeons came safely through.

Told of German Retreat. When the Germans retired to the "Hindenburg line" it was carrier pigeons that carried forward into the front advance lines that brought back the news of the retirement long before telephonic communication could be established. Through the whole area, 1,300 square miles, on a front of 100 miles from Arras to Soissons, carrier pigeons did their work effectively. And wherever the Americans fought, at Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry, Torcy, Broussailles, Belleau wood, Condeco-Brie, Duzancy, Jaulgonne, Fere-en-Tardenois, Bligny, Clerges, Villers-Argon, Plaines, Frappele, Bazoches, Juvigny, St. Mihiel, Argonne forest—carrier pigeons were likewise on the job.

A carrier pigeon aided in capturing a U-boat and her crew. A coast watcher on one of the loneliest parts of the west coast at sundown saw the tip of a periscope rise and then the conning tower of a U-boat. The underwater boat stopped, and the officers and crew were seen on deck. The lookout man tied a note bearing the information to the leg of a carrier pigeon and released it from his basket. The next morning a German submarine, which had run out of gasoline, and its officers and crew were taken to a naval sub-base. A British patrol boat was discovered by a German submarine and torpedoed and shelled. The skipper, having on board a carrier pigeon, wrote a brief message, telling his position and what had happened. As the boat sank, the skipper began swimming for some wreckage to cling to. The pigeon went up gradually in a spiral, and the Germans, seeing it, began shooting at the bird. The skipper, drifting on the wreckage, gave up hope when he saw the bird had been hit. Twenty miles away, however, it lit upon a patroling destroyer, its silver-gray plumage speckled with blood, its tail feathers shot away, and one of its wings wounded. The commanding officer read the message, the destroyer was rushed at full speed to the place indicated, and within three-quarters of an hour from the time that the pigeon was sent off, the officers and crew of the patrol were picked up where they clung to the wreckage.

Spy With Pigeons. An American at Liege, in writing of the German advance, told this incident:

"As I returned to the city, walking along the River Meuse, I saw one who, oblivious of war and its alarms, was dangling his legs over the water and peacefully fishing. The battle in the air, which he must have witnessed, had not moved him. The certainty that the Germans were only a few miles away had not concerned him. He smoked his pipe and placidly cast his line. It was soothing to overstrained nerves to see that 'clap, but it was only a few hours later that I learned a German spy had been arrested as he posed as a fisherman, with a creel full of carrier pigeons."

Another story reads: "In the cow, lamb and tansure that mark the home of a young man told his hands aboard the train bound for Antwerp. And a woman, hardly more than a girl, kept her eyes fastened on the man of prayers. She studied on the devotion with which his fingers slipped from decade to decade of the long, well-worn rosary that hung from the clasp of his waist. But, although his lips appeared to move in humble supplication, the woman saw that he had failed to kiss the cross. The lapse was significant."

"Spy" the girl hissed into the face of the alleged ascetic. In an instant two guards had seized the man and rushed him down the train corridor. The woman examined the small wicker basket behind in the seat. Lifting the lid, she found three pigeons."

Get German Pigeons. A news dispatch briefly summarized such a find thus:

"A German trawler was captured by a British warship near the Orkney Islands to the north of Scotland. She is believed to have been engaged in spying, as carrier pigeons were found on board."

Reference has already been made to the number of messages carried back to the French lines by carrier pigeons in the defense of Verdun. A pigeon captured by the French conveyed this information:

"The rolling fire of the enemy with guns of the heaviest caliber is such that sectors S, C, and H are to a great extent leveled. The garrison, including that of sector V, is disorganized completely. Some of it has been obliged to fall back on the Eighty-third and Ninety-eighth regiments, which also had to retire."

"Sector V (von Raun's) was subjected to such fire that its observation post was put out of order. All sorties are being bombarded and one is occupied constantly in replacing them."

"The battalion asks its immediate relief this evening by fresh troops. It can fight no longer."

(Signed) "FIRST LIEUTENANT STEIN-DRECHT."

Carrier pigeons tell headquarters of the progress of a battle. Here is a typical report when the French army fought along the Alsace:

"It immediately appeared that the destruction of the German defense had been accomplished with as much success as could be hoped for in so difficult a country. By 7:30 a. m. we learned by carrier pigeon and other means that the Chateau de la Motte on the French left near Alenham had been captured, and that at the center Malmanson Fort was taken. At 8:45 Alenham village had been occupied, the prisoners numbered a thousand, and the French assault troops were advancing across the central plateau toward Vandesson and Mont Parussou quarry. At 10:30 the news was that they were at the north of Hill 173, the further spur of Malmanson plateau, and in a quarry 220 yards west of the fort. By 2:45 p. m. the villages of Chavignion and Vandesson, with several neighboring quarries lying on the northern edge of the Alsace hills, had been occupied. Chavignion was the furthest point contemplated in the plan and represented an advance of one and one-half miles made in the face of the best remaining troops of the German empire."

Aided by Camouflage. While many carrier pigeons changed their habits of spilling, finding it a dangerous practice and learned to fly back and then forward at an altitude comparatively low, camouflage aided birds considerably in getting back to their loft carrying with them messages from troops in front. At Fort Vaux, in the battle of Verdun, the crown prince's army had a special group of men shooting down carrier pigeons as they left the fort.

And another story of Verdun. It was at Thiaumont, sixteen times taken, lost and retaken. Wireless and telephones had long ceased to exist. No human being could cross the terrible. The commandant was in desperate need of communicating with the rear. Suddenly the glasses revealed a dog, crouching on its belly, crawling through the flashes, and in a moment of temporary lull leaping forward. On its back was a panner. Nearer and nearer the dog came, and prayers were involuntarily offered as the beast flattened out here and there in the debris for shelter. Another lull and the dog leaped forward and at last it scampered into Thiaumont with the pigeons safe in the pannier. On the dog's collar was this message: "We relieve you by attack on Froidterre, 3 p. m."

"Stop the German battery on our left. Here are the elements for pointing." was the written message of the commandant sent back by one of the pigeons. Another momentary lull and the pigeon is released. Dog and pigeon, faithful and distinguished friends of man, have done their work to save civilization.

Weak From Pain

Mrs. Gibbert Was in Misery, But Doan's Brought Her Splendid Health.

"About 15 years ago my kidneys were in bad condition," says Mrs. Lucy Gibbert, 1530 Columbia Ave., Harvey, Ill. "There was a constant dull, bearing-down pain in the small of my back. I couldn't turn over in bed without such pain I could hardly breathe. Mornings I was stiff, sore and lame all over; my back was like a rusty hinge."

Inflammation of the bladder nearly drove me wild. The kidney secretions passed every little while, day and night, a little at a time, and burned like fire. Great sacs of water formed under my eyes."

"I was in such misery I would become weak and so nervous I would scream. I had nerve-racking headaches and the back of my neck pained me. I was so dizzy I didn't dare bend over for fear of falling on my face. My sight became blurred. I was sick all over."

"Five boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble. Since then I have enjoyed splendid health and I owe it all to Doan's."

Red Cross Workers Aid Exiled Greeks

Athens.—In its work in the Greek islands the American Red Cross has the co-operation of the United States navy. Six submarine chasers have been assigned for transporting personnel and supplies.

On the Island of Mytilene are 52,000 Greeks, who fled there from Asia Minor five years ago. Red Cross workers are regularly visiting all the towns and clothing has been given to about 20,000 of the refugees.

At the outbreak of the war, in 1914, there were 3,000,000 in Asia Minor. More than 500,000 escaped to the islands in the Aegean. Thousands were massacred. Armed bands of Turks roamed the countryside, plundering and murdering Greeks wherever found. The others, driven out of their homes and sent inland, are now returning, to find their homes either destroyed or occupied by Turks.

The refugees in the Aegean Islands intend to return to Asia Minor as soon as conditions permit. At present the Greek government gives each refugee six cents a day.

The Red Cross is devoting much attention to the prevention of further epidemics, such as the typhus scourge, which took such a heavy toll at Mytilene.

Food is scanty and costly, and most of the refugees are underfed, even in the large towns. Nearly all are in rags. The hospitals are short of medicines and other supplies, and have been crowded by influenza cases.

Clothing, blankets and medicine are needed on all the islands. "Canned meat for broth is wanted in the hospitals. American women run the workshops where clothing is made on the three islands of Mytilene, Chios and Samos."

22,000 in Town of Mytilene. Of the 52,000 refugees on Mytilene 22,000 are in the town of Mytilene and its suburbs; the others are scattered about in 62 villages.

Of the 20,000 refugees on Chios part are sheltered in old houses and the rest in wooden barracks, divided with bagging and old carpets into "rooms," each accommodating a family of from five to ten persons.

The islands of Lemnos, Imbros, Tenos and Samothrace are served with Red Cross supplies from Mytilene; Oinoussa is served from Chios, and Ikaria from Samos.

The American Red Cross agents were received at Mytilene with the greatest enthusiasm. The horses were unhitched and the carriage drawn by a cheering crowd to the residence of the governor general, who commanded a private home and placed it at their disposal.

OIL and GASOLINE

POOR grade of fuel is false economy. The money you seem to save on cheap grade oils and gasoline is later spent on motor repairs and shortened life of your motor.

Poor food means poor health—and poor fuel means poor service.

Best Quality at Low Prices

Considering the high quality of our gasoline and oils, our prices are the lowest that you can find.

Scores of auto owners have found that they can get more mileage and better motor performance by always using the same grade oils and gasoline—and that grade ours.

GERMANY CAN'T FULFILL TERMS

Count Von Brockdorff-Rantzau Declares It Is Beyond Country's Power.

SENDS NOTE TO THE ALLIES

Declares "More Deeply We Penetrate Spirit of Treaty the More Convinced We Become of Impossibility of Carrying It Out."

Washington, June 2.—Execution of the peace treaty as framed by the Versailles conference is declared to be "more than the German people can bear" by Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, head of the German peace delegation, in a note to the associated governments outlining the German counter-proposals.

Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, in his note, the text of which was made public by the state department, further asserts:

"The more deeply we penetrate into the spirit of this treaty, the more convinced we become of the impossibility of carrying it out."

The text of the German note, dated May 29, reads:

"I have the honor to transmit to you herewith the observations of the German delegation on the draft treaty of peace. We came to Versailles in the expectation of receiving a peace proposal based on the agreed principles. We were firmly resolved to do everything in our power with a view of fulfilling the grave obligations which we had undertaken."

"We hoped for the peace of justice which had been promised to us. We were grieved when we read in documents the demands made upon us (7) the vicious violence of our enemies."

"The more deeply we penetrate into the spirit of this treaty the more convinced we become of the impossibility of carrying it out. The execution of this treaty are more than the German people can bear."

"With a view to the re-establishment of the Polish state we must renounce indisputably German territory, nearly the whole of the province of West Prussia, which is preponderantly German; of Pomerania, Danzig, which is German to the core. We must let the ancient Hanse town be transformed into a free state under Polish suzerainty."

"We must agree that East Prussia shall be amputated from the body of the state, condemned to a lingering death, and robbed of its northern portion, including Memel, which is purely German. We must renounce Upper Silesia for the benefit of Poland and Czechoslovakia, although it has been in close political connection with Germany for more than 750 years, is indissolubly German, and forms the very foundation of industrial life throughout east Germany."

"Preponderantly German circles (Kreis) must be ceded to Belgium."

"Although the exaction of the cost of the war has been expressly renounced, as yet Germany, thus cut in pieces and weakened, must declare herself ready in principle to bear all the war expenses of her enemies, which would exceed many times over the total amount of German state and private assets. The German people would be condemned to perpetual slave labor."

"In spite of the exorbitant demands, the reconstruction of our economic life is at the same time rendered impossible. We must surrender our merchant fleet. We are to renounce all foreign securities. We are to hand over to our enemies our property in all German enterprises abroad, even in the countries of our allies."

"Even after the conclusion of peace the enemy states are to have the right of confiscating all German property. No German trader in their countries will be protected from these war measures. We must completely renounce our colonies, and not even German missionaries shall have the right to follow their calling there. We must renounce the realization of all our aims in the spheres of politics, economics and ideas."

"The banking position of the country is reported as on the whole sound, present circumstances considered," the board said, and "reserve percentages of the federal reserve system have shown an ability to hold their own."

Practically uniform reports from federal reserve agents were said to point to a summer and autumn of unusual activity.

A warning was added, however, against accepting the prospective prosperity at its full face value until conditions become more clarified.

"The country seems to be passing through a period of free expenditure or reaction from the enforced economy and business restrictions of the war period," a statement by the board said. "If the present activity should prove to be based principally on these causes, a reaction may be looked for when these forces have spent themselves."

The price and reconstruction situation was said to be practically a continuation of that noted in April, with prices showing no tendency to retrograde.

One federal reserve bank found that "the public is slowly adjusting itself to the conviction that there is to be no rapid post-war drop in prices and is reconciling itself to the probability that the old pre-war basis may never again be reached."

Agriculturally, the remarkable promise of the early spring appears to be sustained in an unusual degree, the statement said. Diversification due to organized effort is making progress and the cash returns to farmers are expected to be more than ever before. Prices of cattle are considerably higher than a year ago, while sheep are lower. Receipts of hogs have been smaller, with the price continuing to advance.

In steel and iron the month's output fell to the lowest figures in many months, but a much better tone in the market was noted.

While the bituminous coal industry was reported depressed, with an output less than 70 per cent of that a year ago, operators were said to be optimistic for the future. The current use of the fuel is in excess of production. After several weeks of almost no demand the copper market showed a slight improvement.

General manufacturing was said to be showing decided improvement. The wool markets were strong, with prices in favor of the seller. Large orders have been placed for yarns and finished goods and woolen and worsted mills are going back to full time. These conditions are reflected in the demand for dry goods and shoes. Shoe prices are being marked up for full delivery, the outlook being for an increase of 25 to 50 cents a pair for retailers.

Retail trade is assuming unprecedented volume, while prices continue abnormally high. Retailers in most sections had made little or no adjustment, but continued to demand prices based upon war conditions, the board said. In New York large establishments report a large volume of business, two-thirds greater than a year ago, and in Chicago returns range from 25 to 50 per cent in excess of 1918. In the South there is said to be "no contraction in the public buying power," while a greater proportion of cash sales is reported.

In buildings there has been a distinct revival throughout the country. Real estate values were said to be hardening, with sales of farm lands on the increase.

"The banking position of the country is reported as on the whole sound, present circumstances considered," the board said, and "reserve percentages of the federal reserve system have shown an ability to hold their own."

BOARD REPORTS BUSINESS GOOD

Free Spending Points to Era of Prosperity for the United States.

WAR HELD UP MANY ORDERS

Statements From Federal Reserve Agents Said to Point to Summer and Autumn of Unusual Prosperity.

Washington, June 2.—A noticeable upward trend in business during May, especially in those lines related to the leading retail trades which have felt the release of buying power held back by the war, was reported by the federal reserve board.

Practically uniform reports from federal reserve agents were said to point to a summer and autumn of unusual activity.

A warning was added, however, against accepting the prospective prosperity at its full face value until conditions become more clarified.

BIG FORCE ON BORDER FLIES OVER ATLANTIC

U. S. TROOPS PREPARED TO STOP MEXICAN RAIDERS.

Cavalry, Infantry, Artillery and Three Aviation Units Ready for Any Emergency.

Washington, June 2.—With conditions in Mexico growing more disturbing and with apprehension increasing along the border because of the threatening aspect of affairs, the United States government is prepared for emergencies that might arise.

On the Mexican border today the United States has more than 18,500 troops within striking distance in case of trouble with Mexico or raids by Mexicans across the line. This force is divided into cavalry, 6,000; infantry, 8,500, and artillery, 4,000. Besides these there are three aviation units.

Word has been sent to Washington through confidential channels by Felipe Angeles, recently proclaimed provisional president of Mexico by the Villista forces, stating that the objects of his revolution are simply to restore the constitution of 1857 and to protect the lives and property of Mexicans and foreigners alike "from spoliation at the hands of President Carranza and other forces, working for the downfall of the Mexican people."

General Angeles says that he hopes this communication will be placed in the hands of the officials of the United States, from whom he asks no favors of present. He expresses the hope that the time will come when Mexico will be restored to the confidence of the people of the United States at which time he will formally ask this government for recognition.

The town of Esperanza, located 525 kilometers south of Nogales on the main line of the Southern Pacific de Mexico, was attacked by Yaqui Indians, according to telegraphic information received here. Details are meager, but several Mexicans and one American are said to have been killed.

SEE REFUND IN LUXURY TAX. Internal Revenue Collectors Face Problem of Returning $1,500,000 If Repeal Is Voted.

Washington, May 29.—Internal revenue collectors face the problem of refunding more than $1,500,000 to taxpayers when the luxury tax is repealed, unless congress comes to their rescue by setting the repeal date ten days or two weeks after the passage of the repealing act. It will take ten days after the repeal act becomes a law to notify retailers to quit collecting the tax, officials say. It is estimated that 40,000,000 persons would become entitled to refunds before the work of halting collections could be completed.

BOMBS FIRED IN 8 CITIES

Anarchists Attempt to Kill Attorney General Palmer and Many Others.

OFFICIALS ESCAPE DEATH

Two Killed in Washington—Woman Slain and Several Hurt by Blast in New York—Church Blown Up.

Washington, June 4.—A terrorist bomb plot, covering the entire eastern section of the country, was attempted late Monday night.

It was aimed against law enforcement officials and the bombs were timed to explode simultaneously in many cities.

Officials are trying to connect these outrages with the "May day" bombs which were sent by mail to 30 officials in every section. Last night's bombs were not mailed. Those responsible for the outrages placed them at the homes of those they sought to assassinate.

In Washington the bomb was thrown at the residence of Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, 2132 I street.

Mr. Palmer has been the leader in the prosecution of radicals. Previously he was enemy property custodian.

The lower part of the Palmer residence was wrecked. None of the family was injured, as all were on the upper floors.

Two persons were killed by the explosion. One of them is thought to have been the man who set the bomb. The other may have been an accomplice or merely a passerby.

A fragment of one of the bodies was blown across B street and was found on the doorstep of the residence of Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy. Another part of a body was blown across the street and went through one of the front windows of Helmer H. Bryn, the envoy extraordinary from Norway to the United States, who lives at 2137 I street, N. W. This fragment fell near a cot on which a baby was sleeping.

Those at whom the bombs were aimed were:

A. Mitchell Palmer, attorney general of the United States. His residence in Washington was badly damaged. Police say two men were killed. One is supposed to have been the one who set the bomb. He was blown to pieces.

Harry L. Davis, mayor of Cleveland. His residence was badly damaged. No one was wounded.

Justice Albert F. Hayden of the Roxbury municipal court, Boston. Residence damaged, but no one was at home.

Judge W. H. Thompson of the Pittsburgh federal district. Home damaged by bomb aimed at him, but placed on porch of adjoining residence of C. J. Cassidy.

Judge Charles C. Nott, Jr., of general sessions, New York. Woman caretaker killed. Several other persons wounded.

Leland W. Powers—Massachusetts state representative and son of former congressman. Home at Newtonville, Mass., badly damaged.

Max Gold—Wealthy silk manufacturer at Paterson, N. J.

Other bombs were thrown in Philadelphia, where a Catholic church and a residence were blown up.

All the windows on both sides of the street, on either side of the Palmer house and across the way, were blown in, and pictures were blown from the walls.

Police picked up along with bits of clothing of one of the men killed a copy of "Plain Words," a radical publication. Other fragments of this and other radical papers were found in the neighborhood.

Other literature was in the form of dodgers, the heading of which, in large red type, read, "Plain Talk to Anarchists," and bore the printed signature "Anarchistic Fighters."

THIS WEEK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I decided to try it. I took it for week and felt a little better. I kept up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLEIGH, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthleigh.

Perfectly Willing. "What sort of a fellow is he?" "Well, if you and he have had dinner together and you insist upon paying the check, he won't even give you an argument."

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing, vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper—Ady.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk farther and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions caused by rawhide."

The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises men in training to shake Foot-Ease in their shoes each morning.

There is no foot powder equal to Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic healing powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath, for hot, tired, aching, perspiring, smarting, swollen, tender feet, corns, bunions, blisters or callouses. What wouldn't you give to be relieved of one day's pain of your corns and bunions? Here is relief for every day. You won't realize this until you have tried Allen's Foot-Ease yourself.

You simply forget all about your feet they are made so comfortable. Ask your druggist to-day for a package of ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE.
